Kindness

A psychiatrist pondered the state of the world as he came to the end of a long, difficult day. He had dealt with both violence and apathy, with a young woman who saw no reason to go on living and with a man who was sure he could never again put his life together. Some of the problems were the result, he reasoned, of chemical imbalance or of physical ailments; but as he reviewed his day, and compared it with most other days and with the experience of his colleagues in psychiatry, he offered an estimate: At least half of those who are mentally ill could have been spared their illness by “simple human kindness.”

The time to do kindness, to think it, to speak it, is now. If it be true, that more than half of the mentally ill could have been spared their illness by “simple human kindness,” then how many other lesser pains could be avoided—and how much more happiness could be wrought—if only each of us could share a bit more kindness? The demand is still far greater than the supply.

This is the day to be kind. Tomorrow will be, too, and so will the next day. But today is the day to be born again in kindness, for you and I won't pass this day, or this way, again.

Words To Live By

- If you love God most, you will love others more.
- Don't keep God in a box; include him at the table.
- As swimmers dare to lie face to the sky and water bears them, as hawks rest upon air and air sustains them, so would I learn to attain free fall, and float into Creator Spirit's deep embrace, knowing no effort earns that all-surrounding grace.
- I find something in every day that pleases me. The cornerstone, my belief in God, makes my heart glad and my face shining.
- We build up the body with nutrition and exercise, but how do we build up the body of Christ? Through fellowship, training and service in love.
- If no one ever took risks, Michelangelo would have painted the Sistine floor, instead of the ceiling.

The Youth saw an Opportunity

Recently, the Internet carried the story of a church youth group traveling through the South in a large motor home. All was going smoothly until they came upon a long string of stopped vehicles. Whatever the trouble was—an accident, road work, a police chase—they could do nothing for a while. As they grew bored and frustrated, some of them came up with a thoughtful plan. They decided to go to as many vehicles as possible and offer the occupants the use of the bathroom in their motor home. Soon, several people responded to the invitation.

Then, another good idea surfaced. They saw a flat-bed truck also in line. They went to the driver and asked him if they might stand on the truck bed and play their musical instruments and sing. He consented. Before long, they were “on stage” playing singing Christian music. Other travelers, hearing the joyful sound, gathered around the truck and participated in the activity. The youth had found ways to turn a troublesome delay into an opportunity to make a Christian witness.
